

SMITH - How'd you know I was here?

MAKOWSKI - [chuckles] Well, we may keep secrets, but we still know each other.

SMITH - Just like I know why you came to my class yesterday.

MAKOWSKI - Oh, yeah? I got under your skin.

SMITH - [sighs] Well, when somebody who knows you for a long time says that you've given up you start to thinking maybe they're right.

SMITH - And?

MAKOWSKI - I had a run of bad luck. I let it get to me. But not anymore.

SMITH - I loved being in that room. I loved it. [chuckles] The passion, the hope it reminded me of why I took this job to produce the best agents the Bureau has ever seen. And if that means we graduate 10, then we'll know it's the right 10. And if that Ryan Booth is here to spy on me then let him report that to the Bureau. You with me?

MAKOWSKI - The needs of the Bureau.

SMITH - The needs of the Bureau.

MAKOWSKI - [indistinct conversation] These people have no idea what you did two years ago.

SMITH - You saved their lives.

MAKOWSKI - He's up for parole. He won't get it.
