

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

So, Dave. Tell us about yourself. Who are you?

DAVE:

Well, I'm an executive assistant for a major pet products company . . .

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

Dave, I don't want you to tell us what you do. I want you to tell us who you are.

DAVE:

Oh, alright, um... I'm a pretty good guy. I like playing tennis on occasion.

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

Also, not your hobbies Dave. Just tell us who you are.

DAVE:

Maybe you could give me an example of what a good answer would be? Um...

[turns to another person sitting in the circle]

What did you say?

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

You want Lou to tell you who you are?

DAVE:

No, I just, uh... I'm a nice, easygoing man, I might be a little indecisive at times...

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

Dave, you're describing your personality. I just want to know... who you are.

DAVE:

I don't know what the hell you want me to say! . . . I mean I'm sorry, I just, I want to answer your question, just not, not doing it right, I guess.

DR. BUDDY RYDELL:

I think we're getting the picture, Dave. Let's move on.
