

MAC:
You work for me, don't you?

JOSH:
(a little nervous)
Uh . . . yeah.

MAC:
Thought so.
(beat)
Here with your kids?

JOSH:
No, just--looking around.

MAC:
(pause)
Me too . . . I come here every Saturday.

He studies Josh for a moment.

Can't see this on a marketing report.

JOSH:
What's a marketing report?

MAC:
Exactly.

He examines Josh for another couple of seconds, then turns to the shelves behind him.

MAC (contd):
What do you think of this thing?

JOSH:
Stanley Cup Hockey set! I love that, only . . .

MAC:

Only what?

JOSH:

Only the pieces don't move.

MAC:

What do you mean?

JOSH:

Well, in the old set you could move the pieces up and down the ice. Now they just spin. It was more like real hockey the other way.

(he looks at Mac)

How come they changed it?

MAC:

I don't know.
