

We see that she is on the jobs section of a museum's website.
Julie then reaches down to her notebook and crosses off a name from her list, which has at least twenty museums on it, all of which are crossed off.

JULIE (CONT'D)
Well, that was...
(looking at phone, yawns)
Seven hours well spent.

While looking at the museum's webpage, there is an ad for a company called TRANSLATION STATION that is looking to hire language tutors for adults looking to learn second languages.

JULIE (CONT'D)
Language tutor? Okay...

Julie then reads that the qualifications include knowing numerous languages and having a flexible schedule. Julie smiles as she types furiously.

CUT TO:

18 EXT. LU'S BREWS CAFE - OUTSIDE PATIO - DAY

18

Julie is now with her first clients, ROSE and EARL, 70s, a loving, but cranky retired couple. *

START Sc. 1

JULIE
Okay, so Rose, Earl, what can I help you with?

EARL
You could help me get out of this class.

ROSE
Eh, don't listen to him. What we need, dear, is to learn Italian. We're going on a vacation to Rome, Venice, the whole deal and I want to be able to speak the language.

EARL
What she really means is that she wants to know if people are talking about her in Italian.

ROSE
Why can't it be both?

JULIE

It can. And Italy is a beautiful country. You're gonna love it.

ROSE

My family immigrated here from Italy over a hundred years ago and I've never been. We're very excited.

EARL

I hear they have pasta carts on the streets.

Rose flashes him a look. Earl shrugs.

EARL (CONT'D)

What? That's exciting!

JULIE

I love Italy. The language is like pure poetry and the scenery is so beautiful, you can't help but just fall in love with it.

ROSE

Oh, that sounds amazing.
(pointing to Earl)
All he ever falls in love with is a hot dog at the ballgame.

EARL

That's not true. I also love nachos.

JULIE

Let's start with the basics.
Buongiorno.

ROSE

Beautiful. What does that mean?

EARL

Good morning.

JULIE

That's right, Earl. Good morning.

EARL

Buongiorno, my dear.

Rose can't believe it as Earl kisses her hand.

ROSE

Honey, you are right. I'm already feeling the romance!

← END Sc. 1